

paripūrayati, °te; once °pūrati, once °pūryati? (= Pali paripūreti, used similarly to mg. 1; not, seemingly, in these mgs. in Skt.), (1) accomplishes fully, completes, perfects, fulfills (cf. next): daśamāṁ bhūmim °rayitvā Mv i.142.3; Bhadracarīm (17) or bodhicarīm (22) paripūrayā-māṇah Bhad 17, 22; sarvakāram (every form, of Tathāgatas) °rayiṣyāmaḥ Sukh 10.1; ṣaṭpāramitāḥ °rayati Kv 68.19; 82.9; -pāramitāḥ °rayitavyā Kv 50.17, 19; sarvatyāgā-dhimuktiṁ paripūrye (tyāga-) Śiks 34.1 (prose), read some 3 sg. opt. form, °reyet? °rayet? °ret (cf. under 2?); (2) peculiarly used in Mv iii.356.6 (vs), so bhinnayānāpātra (his ship being wrecked) paripūrati (v.l. °rayati, but meter seems to support °rati) sāgarām (so mss.) narapravaro (so Senart em. for unmetr. ms. naravarō), which seems to mean the noble man 'filled the sea', i. e. gave his life up to it (for the benefit of his companions); this is what the story certainly attributes to him. I have no exact parallel to this usage but can conceive no other interpretation; Senart's is very unsatisfactory (and involves the most implausible em. sāgare).

paripūri, °rī, f. (see also pūri, pūri; this word serves as n. act to prec.; in Skt. paripūrti, also BHS, e. g. LV 32.18; also pāripūri, q.v.; both in Pali, but pāri° seems to be commoner, so that PTSD and pw 7.356 consider pāri° the 'correct' form; this is disproved by BHS, where pari° is commoner, and °ri commoner than °rī; pari° could, of course, not be explained by Senart's theory, Mv i.373, which involves the vrddhi of secondary derivation), lit. filling up: divyāḥ kāyāḥ °rim gamiṣyanti LV 401.6; usually fig., fulfilment, accomplishment: pāramitā-nām °pūryā(i, dat.) SP 256.11 (prose); (pratijñā-)paripūri-LV 275.14 (prose); prañidhi-paripūrye (so read with mss.) Mv ii.205.16 (vs), by fulfilment of my previous vow (instr.); prañidhāna-paripūryai (dat., so with mss., Lefm. wrongly em. °rtyai) LV 31.22; manorathā-sa-paripūri Mvy 6334; śūnyatāyāḥ °rir Śiks 117.9 (prose); icchā-°rīḥ Bbh 123.25 (prose); other forms, °rīḥ Dbh 56.28 (prose); °rim id. 59.26 (prose); Sādh 34.15 (vs, metr. indiff.); °raye Gv 73.10, 26 (prose); °ryām Śiks 30.6; 119.14 (prose). See also pratipūri.
